
multiple popups on one page won't close

Posted by maxolivier - 2007/12/19 10:56

Hi there and thank you so much for this great mambot.

I installed it and tried it immediatly, it works great except that if try to put different popups in one page, only one will close ... any solution or advice?

Thanks

At the current stage, the JPopup mambot only allows you to put one popup per page, the use of multiple popups on the same page is possible however it requires some special name adjustments! Ovidiu

Hello,

I need to have multiple pop ups on one page, could you please let me know what the name adjustments are?

Thank you

Ann

To have multiple popups, you would need to edit the mambots/content/jpopup.php file, and replace all the basic names from the html code there with something similar but unique, make sure you keep the logical order!

You would also need to rename that jpopup.php file, so you create another mambot!

Hello,

I had a look in the file, but I am unsure which are the basic names. Could you please let me know?

Do I then need to create a new mambot for each pop up on the page?

Thank you

You would need to change all the names that refer to the html code, basically all the $GLOBALS code would need to be changed and variables properly renamed!

And yes, this is the idea, to create a new mambot for each popup you would like to use, however this is not very easy to achieve since all the code needs to be modified! Maybe you should go with a simpler solution, however i am unsure what that would be in your case!

Hello,

Where would I find someone I could pay to do this for me if it is too hard for myself?

Thank you
Ann
