Could you post here a url to your page with the popup and one with the html code you need to insert? Ovidiu

You need to insert the JPopup code inside the page where you want it to show, for instance if you like to appear on the frontpage, simply open the frontpage article and add this code in the page source, in the end:

{jpopup }
html code here
{/jpopup }

and replace the "html code here" text with the actual code you got from that subscription module!

Well the popup shows, allthrough you should adjust the position from the mambot settings, however the html code you added inside the popup is not correct, please check the attached file on how the code should look like, and as a note, you need to add that in your page html source if you are using an online editor!

This might be a good tutorial http://www.tutorialhero.com/tutorial-52-css_background_image_guide.php on how to setup a css background image, and this also http://www.stopdesign.com/articles/replace_text/ for the DIV element!

A simple div style="background-color:#00000" would fix the issue, or you could also set the JPopup background color to black(code #000000)!

Whatever I try, I won't get this script showed correctly. Infact, I won't get any script showed correctly. The popup just shows the script itself! Any with this specific script, the script will be shown in de content. (yes I use {jpopup} and {/jpopup}. Isn't this bot stable at all or is it in conflict with something else? I use Joomla 1.0.15.

When adding the code in your content page, you need to add it in your page source and not in the html preview window of your editor!
