I was wondering if I can attach this pop-up window to a link and display it on click.

Thanks for the plugin

Hi there! It is possible, however the current layout of the mambot has been designed to only open the popup automatically on page load!

However if you like i can show you how to hack it:

1. open the mambots/content/jpopup.php file and look at the line 39, you should see this code

<img src='/mambots/content/jpopup/images/pixel.gif' onload="startPopUp();">

2. delete or html comment that code, like

<!-- <img src='/mambots/content/jpopup/images/pixel.gif' onload="startPopUp();">
-->

3. now when you want to load the popup on click in one of your pages, you need to first add the popup code in it({jpopup}...{/jpopup}), and then add the link code like

My link here

the important code that will start the popup on click being

onclick='startPopUp();'

Hope it helps! Ovidiu

Hello, I just downloaded the mambot. Is it possible to display a form from RSForm in the popup? Also, I'd like to change the mambot to enable it on click instead of on page load. However, when I tried to follow your instructions, line 39 was different than what you specified. For me, line 39 says:

<DIV class="jpopup" style="font-family::

Hope you can help!

Hi there! We have update the code meanwhile, what you need to do now is delete line 62 containing this code

<script language="javascript" type="text/javascript">startPopUp();</script>

and then add your onclick="startPopUp();" code to the href link you want to use

---

As for RSForm, it should be possible, try and follow their instructions to create a form and enter that code inside the popup

Hope it helps! Ovidiu

Posted by mike - 2007/10/23 21:31

Hi thank you for the quick reply. I will make the change according to your instructions. As for RSForm, you don't actually do any coding. There's two options. The first option is that you're given a link to use, say from a menu, like this:

<http://tinyurl.com/2xtk4q>

The second option is their mambot where I just type in (mosforme 2} where 2 is the item ID of the form I created.

So I suppose the question would be can I utilize their mambot within your popup? Or does the popup need actual form code?

Re:Can I pop the window up on click?

Posted by Ovidiu - 2007/10/23 21:38

I think you can use the mambot code inside the popup code, it should display the processed html RSForm code inside the popup!

Anyway, we have not tried that, so let us know how it goes! Ovidiu

Re:Can I pop the window up on click?

Posted by mike - 2007/10/23 23:07

I am sorry, I don't know how to make it work. Below is what I tried, I'm sure it's wrong as I don't know the correct syntax:

{jpopup}Click Here To Submit Your Testimonial{/jpopup}

The link above is the link directly to the form. As you can see on the tinyURL link, it didn't put anything on the page at all..The mambot code to include the form in a content item is simply {mosforme 2} but I don't have any idea how to include it with the onclick code.. :(

Yes, it's published, but remember you had me modify the PHP file to make it so that it would work on click instead of on page load? What I didn't understand was how to translate what you said into the HTML that I need to put into the content item...?

Ok, then you need to put that code back, i am not seeing any link with the onclick feature, so if you want to make your popup show you need to put the deleted code back in the php file!

:blink: Now I'm very confused. Let me tell you exactly what I want to be able to do: I want to have a link that says "Click Here To Sumbit Your Testimonial" When the user clicks the link, a popup appears with the form to fill to be filled out. My RSForm component has a mambot which will let me say {mosforme 2} in a content item and it will place the form. It also will give me a URL location for the form, which in this case, is here:
/index.php?option=com\_forme&fid=2&Itemid=50

Ok, I cannot attach my jpopup.php but I made the change you said to make earlier in this thread, deleted one line...

OK, then a suggestion to do this would be to use this code:

{jpopup}{mosforme 2}{/jpopup}

My new link here

Please note that the link needs to be added as html source, else if you use any html editor it will go as simple text!

You could also add the link as a normal url by using your html editor, but instead of the url address use the javascript:showPopUp(); code

Again, this link needs to be outside the jpopup code so you can see it when the page loads!

Hi there...

I would really appreciate it if you would explain with more detail how can I create a pop up on click. I am a complete novice with html - so to say I know enough to mess things up. I read the previous comments and I have the following question:

I have the following sentence in an article:

"The turret is protected with second generation Chobham armour."

how can I create a popup onclick window in which I can explain what the phrase "Chobham armour" means, using your jpopup mambot without linking it up to anything else? example : user clicks on Chobham armour and gets a beautiful pop up with text in it.

mambot version is 1.0.3

Hope you can help me.
Thank you in advance!

{jpopup jpopup_bgcolor=#FFFFFF|jpopup_bcolor=#000000}
(some html to format the text)The Text{/jpopup}

before I deleted the code it would show me an automatic pop up. Now it shows nothing. Where do i put the code you provide ...

Then, since you have deleted the automatic popup appearance javascript code, you need to put the text i attached in that post inside your page with the popup, check the attached file to this post for a clear example

Hi and thanks for your reply.

OK I just want to make confirm I'm understanding this and doing things correctly.. it's all a tad confusing to a PHP coding n00b :)

So I've removed line 66 from jpopup.php, which was the javascript one containing startPopUp() (correct?)

Next, I understand that I should be adding the following OnClick code into the href portion of my hyperlink, but I'm not sure exactly how. Here's the original link from my current code (before any conversions to make the image link to a JPopup window):

(see attachment)

Thanks in advance for any assistance!! <http://www.joomlplug.com/images/fbfiles/files/mycode.txt>

As a OT side note/question: Is Fireboard notorious for being so touchy about reserved words in filenames and code listings? I'm kind of surprised at some of its behaviors..

Re:Can I pop the window up on click?

Posted by admin - 2008/03/27 02:38

Simply add before your href tag the onclick="..." function , check attached, you need to replace the calling code there with the actual jpopup function

Indeed, fireboard seems to have some issues currently, not sure if it's something in the settings or the code, anyway i will check to see if an upgrade is available, sorry for the trouble!

Hi Ovidiu,

Sorry for being dense about this.. I'm still a bit confused about exactly what code goes into the onclick parameter, between the double parens.

I guess where I'm getting confused in implementing the example that I gave you and based on your attached file, as to where I introduce the jpopup tag, what goes into it, and what I'm putting into the onclick parameters.

I really appreciate you trying to help here, and also want you to know i'm a diehard loyal fan of your products.. i use JoomlaCloner on every Joomla site I administrate and we love it.. has saved our rear ends several times...

Hi Ovidiu,

I've entered the code exactly, but it doesn't seem to be popping up, just going to the page. I don't have any reference to the JPopup mambot at this point, and I'm guessing that's what's missing. What if anything do I need to put in between the Jpopup tags in conjunction with the other code you already mentioned?

Unfortunately the way that form works is incompatible with JPopup, you will need a form that uses javascript to send and validate the form to the server without reloading that page, this tutorial might help <http://www.9lessons.info/2009/04/submit-form-jquery-and-ajax.html>
